

Tina Hutchinson

Councillor candidate

I am seeking re-election because I truly believe that Rocky Mountain House is moving in the right direction to build a stronger, more vibrant community that will build positive and strong economic development in our area. When we attract people, support our businesses, and foster resilience, we create the foundation for long-term prosperity. Rocky Mountain House has incredible potential for growth. Our Strategic Plan has given us direction, and over the last two years we've built real momentum. I want to continue working with residents, neighboring communities, and all levels of government to make sure we take advantage of the opportunities ahead of us.

I bring both experience and perspective to the table. Over the last four years on council, I've learned a great deal about how municipal government works. I also completed the Municipal Elected Leadership Certificate through the University of Alberta, which gave me training in seven key areas of governance. Beyond that, I've spent countless hours in workshops, webinars, and research to keep myself informed and ready to contribute new ideas.

These experiences allow me to make balanced, informed decisions that reflect the needs of our community.

If re-elected, my top priorities are:

- Strengthening community connections and culture.
- Supporting local businesses and creating the right conditions for sustainable growth.
- Promoting tourism to showcase our natural assets and bring in visitors and investment.
- Addressing housing challenges so that residents and newcomers alike have affordable, suitable options.
- And building pride in our town—because pride attracts and retains people, workers, and investment.

I'm grateful for the chance to have served on council these past four years. I've had the opportunity to meet so many people, to contribute on committees, and to see Rocky Mountain House recognized across the province as a resilient community that makes things happen. Moving forward, I believe we must continue to collaborate, communicate, and celebrate our successes.

With your support, I am confident that I can continue to be part of the team that helps lead Rocky Mountain House toward an even brighter future.
